And the cottage is already paid for; it'd be a shame to waste it. What socialists propose is the expropriation of the big banks and monopolies that oppress and exploit the people-not only the working class, but also the middle class and small producers. We can notice the leaves clinging stubbornly to their green or the flowers getting a headstart on spring and feel unnerved by the changes that humans are causing on this earth. How does this Unbound (All Good Things Book 1) allow for a redefinition of reflection.
